.....Hueyi Teo Tekuhtli Tlamakazkeh Ketzalkoatl (Supreme Director) of IN KALTONAL, Spiritual Institution for the cosmic man ( Native Mexican “Church”), the first indigenous spiritual organization to be recognized by the government of Mexico in over 500 years. Over 100 ministers and spiritual guides of In Kaltonal have been named to date.

.....Co- founder of Movimiento Confederado Restaurador de la Cultura de Anahuak (confederation for the Restoration of the Culture of Anahuak)

.....Founder and director of Tekpan and Kalmekatl Tonantzin (new Pyramid and Center of Learning, or Indigenous University, now under construction in Teotihuacan, Mexico).

Tlakaesel has addressed audiences at M.I.T., Harvard University, The Universities of Connecticut, Texas, Illinois, Colorado, Maine, and others, Temple University, Virginia Commonwealth University, Connecticut College, Omega Institute, National Autonomous University of Mexico, University of Bern, Switzerland, the Autonomous University of Barcelona, Spain, and many other places. He has also given talks and led workshops at many centers, kalpultin, churches, reservations, bookstores, schools, television and radio programs, etc. in the U.S., Mexico, Canada, Fiji, England, Wales, Germany, Ireland, Switzerland, Holland, Portugal, France and other nations.

He has spent over 50 years studying the great ancestral cultures of the continent, sharing his knowledge with indigenous and non-indigenous people alike.

Tlakaesel, along with Slow Turtle, Wildcat, Big Toe, Chief Windsong, and other Indigenous leaders developed the Four Colors Ceremony (an inspiring and unifying ceremony which honors the four directions and the four colors of humanity). The Four Colors Ceremony was first conducted in 1990 at Watuppa, the Wampanoag reservation in Freetown, Mass. during the Peace camp held there, and Tlakaelel has since brought the ceremony to many parts of the U.S. and Canada, and around the world.

He was the inspiration for the Peace and Dignity Journeys, 1992, a 15,000 mile relay run throughout the Americas, and he coordinated the Mexican portion of the run. The Message of the Peace and Dignity Journeys was to recognize the resistance and preservation of the indigenous cultures of the Americas and to bring together people of all backgrounds, nations, and colors, recognizing ourselves as all indigenous to Planet Earth, and to conserve and protect our Mother Earth and cooperate as people so that our children may survive and grow in a world of peace.

After the end of the Peace and Dignity Journeys, Tlakaelel began preparation for the building of the Tekpan De La Paz, the Pyramid of Peace, near the ancient pyramids of Teotihuacan, Mexico. With the invasion of the Europeans 500 years ago, the advancement and evolution of the Mexica people was suspended, but the work of the ancestors has now been resumed, and work has begun on the first pyramid constructed by indigenous peoples since the invasion. All are invited to participate in the building of the pyramid and the associated Kalmekatl, or Indigenous University.

In 1947, Tlakaelel took on the mission of exploring and scientifically corroborating the history of the Confederation of Anahuak, and the Four Arrows Migration (the great cultural migration from Mexico throughout the Americas). He has found evidence of this migration in many parts of the continent including Chaco Canyon, the Susquehanna River Petroglyphs, the many mounds in Ohio, pyramids in Illinois, and other states, and evidence in the language of many native peoples.

Tlakaelel has been the inspiration for the founding of many Kalpultin (Kalpullis) in the US, Canada, Mexico, and Europe. These Kalpultin have served to bring hundreds of people of all colors and backgrounds together for learning, fellowship, ceremony, and community.

In April of 1997, Tlakaelel, along with the His Holiness, the Dalai Lama, was an important part of the Inter Traditions Assembly held in Arvillard, France. This Assembly was attended by 7500 people, and has been filmed for worldwide distribution. Tlakaelel was instrumental in the founding of the Circle of United Traditions, which is now based at the Karma Ling Institute in Arvillard, France.

Tlakaelel most recently lived in Teotihuacan, Mexico was traveling and teaching in the United States and other countries for over 20 years. He was amazingly knowledgeable of and spoke on a vast array of topics including the Four Arrows Migration, the cultural history of the People of the Americas including the changes brought about with the European contact, coming earth changes, the four suns (12,000 year cataclysmic cycles of human evolution), the Red Road (the indigenous minded philosophy and way of life), health and healing, personal growth, personal destiny as well as the destiny of human beings as a species, the present crises in the world today, upcoming world changes, Death as simply a transition, the coincidence of the ancient traditions and modern science, various other spiritual matters, and many other topics. He was a great inspiration to children, youth, and adults of all backgrounds, and brings a message of peace, cooperation, and the basic unity of all peoples of all colors in one human race. He also conducted a variety of ceremonies in certain situations, and at times, when possible would offer individual consultations.

In a ceremony in the chamber of deputies in Mexico City, Tlakaelel was recently named Grandfather of the Grandfathers and Spiritual guide of the Mexicanidad by an indigenous council.
